

Statistics on non-performing loans Q2 2023

September 2023

After several years of uninterrupted improvement in the credit quality of the portfolios, this second quarter of the year has shown a slowdown in the reduction of doubtful loans, which is more pronounced in some credit segments such as the loans for home purchase. This segment has risen from a NPL rate of 2.34% in the first quarter of 2023 to 2.45% a quarter later. This is a slight deterioration of 11 basis points, but it is still a favourable development compared to the 2.66% observed in the second quarter of 2022.

It is not surprising that the tightening of monetary policy and the consequent rise in interest rates is having a double effect both on the market and on banks' balance sheets. Firstly, from the new lending side, as can be witnessed how the demand is suffering and secondly, regarding NPLs as this puts additional pressure on family budgets in a context of high inflation. The former, together with the increase in early repayments, is adversely affecting the volume of outstanding loans (denominator in the ratio), which fell by 0.7% quarter-on-quarter, with a negative impact on the NPL ratio. For loans for housing renovation, the 0.1% decrease in NPLs over the last three months was not offset by the decrease in the outstanding balance (-1.6%), resulting in a slight increase in NPL ratio from 3.69% in Q1 2023 to 3.75%.

In parallel, both the NPL ratios for the real estate and construction sectors developed somewhat less favourably in the last quarter. In the real estate sector, the doubtful loan ratio remained virtually unchanged, rising by only 2 basis points to 3.46% between March and June 2023, while the construction sector saw a deterioration of 14 basis points, reaching 7.92% (both values are far from the all-time high levels in the series). These negative developments are in turn related to a decrease in the outstanding balances, as both sectors showed positive developments in their NPL exposures on both a quarterly and annual basis.

In general, we could agree that the market is at a turning point due to the restrictive policies that characterise the new cycle. We will have to wait and see how the coming quarters behave to confirm this turnaround. However, even considering that monetary tightening was expected to show its effects at some point, we do not anticipate a scenario with alarming figures. It is possible that towards the end of the year the credit quality of the residential real estate portfolio will suffer to some extent, by another 10 basis points or so, but all within a context where credit entities have reasonably consistent levels of capital and provisions.
